

IX. List 3 members of the F&M community familiar with your abilities and proposal, and willing to recommend you—usually, 2 or 3 professors, but you may include one person who knows you outside of class (employer, supervisor, coach, etc.). Ask one of these three (preferably the one who knows the most about the field of your proposal) for a letter of recommendation commenting on the value and feasibility of your project and your qualifications to undertake it. The recommender can print the letter and put it in an envelope sealed and signed across the back sea, which you can include with your print application; or, s/he can mail or email it to the scholarship coordinator. The selection committee will ask for the other 2 letters if necessary. In addition, you may include letters or printouts of emails from outside supervisors or directors with whom you would be working or researching, showing that they endorse and support your plan.

- 1.
- 2.
- 3.

X. ___ Check here if your project requires a Human Subjects form; fill out and attach that form. See guidelines; basically, needed if you plan to gather personal information from individuals by interviewing them or distributing survey forms.

By submitting this application, I consent to releasing my application to faculty committees who choose winners. If I win, I hereby agree to the release of my biographical essay and project statement to the donor of the award, and to the posting of a summary of my project in the Web and other locations.

Signed _____

Check back over this form; be sure you answered all questions

Check Print Preview to see that the form is oriented properly, and fits on 3 pages

Don't forget to attach the supplementary parts described under V to IX

Please attach pieces together with a paper clip; no envelope is needed