Poppy

You do not tend, tend
To air thinned and pressed,
Featureless dreams, flat merciless
Streets tangle like threads.

Meet me where blood unhinges
From flesh, inch by inch
I am silently led
To your phantom city in Poland.

Where a tank flattened your dog
And Russians set out from a fog
Thick and dull as storm clouds.